Crowder's journey begins with the letter "A" for "Absence," as she grapples with the absence of her grandfather, Jordan, who passed away before she was born. Driven by a deep desire to connect with him, she sets out to piece together his life story, using letters, photographs, and interviews with his family and friends.

As Crowder moves through the alphabet, each letter becomes a lens through which she explores a different aspect of Jordan's character and the world he lived in. From "Bravery" to "Sacrifice" to "Victory," she uncovers a generation of men and women who fought for their country, raised their families, and built the foundation for the America we know today.
