Hana was a beautiful humpback whale. She was born with a large hump on her back, and she was teased by the other whales. They called her names and made fun of her. Hana was so hurt by their words that she began to hide away from the other whales.

One day, Hana was swimming by herself when she met a wise old whale. The old whale told Hana that she should not be ashamed of her hump. He said that her hump was a gift from Mother Nature, and that she could use it to help others.

Hana was surprised by the old whale's words. She had never thought of her hump as a gift before. She began to think about what the old whale had said, and she realized that he was right.

The next day, Hana swam back to the other whales. She held her head high and did not hide her hump. The other whales were surprised to see her so confident. They asked her why she had changed.

Hana told the other whales about the wise old whale she had met. She told them that he had said that her hump was a gift from Mother Nature, and that she could use it to help others.

The other whales were amazed by Hana's story. They realized that they had been wrong to tease her. They apologized to Hana and welcomed her back to the group.

Hana was so happy to be accepted by the other whales. She knew that she was different, but she also knew that she was special. She used her hump to help other whales in need. She helped whales who were stranded on the beach. She helped whales who were injured or sick. She even helped whales who were being attacked by sharks.

Hana's hump was a gift from Mother Nature. She used her hump to help others, and she made a difference in the world.
