

Season Of Blood: A Journey Through The Rwandan Genocide

In 1994, Rwanda was plunged into a genocide that claimed the lives of over 800,000 people in just 100 days. The perpetrators were primarily Hutu extremists, who targeted Tutsi men, women, and children in a systematic campaign of violence. Immaculée Ilibagiza, a Tutsi woman, was one of the lucky ones who survived. She hid in a cramped bathroom for 91 days, with seven other women, as the genocide raged outside.

Season of Blood is Ilibagiza's harrowing and insightful account of her experience during the genocide. She writes with a raw honesty and emotion that is both heartbreaking and inspiring. She describes the fear and uncertainty she felt as she hid for her life, the guilt she felt for not being able to save her family and friends, and the hope that kept her going.
