In the aftermath of the legendary Trojan War, as the smoke clears and the heroes and villains are laid to rest, three extraordinary Trojan women emerge from the shadows. Their lives intertwined, their destinies forever bound by the conflict that tore their city apart.

Natasha Mostert, the acclaimed author of the Our Book Library bestselling The Other Queen, weaves a captivating tapestry of historical fiction in her groundbreaking The Girls of Troy Trilogy. The first installment, The Silver-Handled Knife, introduces us to Cressida, Briseis, and Andromache, three women who will forever be remembered in the annals of Greek mythology.

Cressida: The Woman Scorned

Briseis: The War Prize

Briseis, a beautiful priestess of Apollo, is torn from her temple and becomes the prize of Achilles, the greatest warrior of Greece. As his captive, she must navigate the complexities of love and loyalty amid the brutality of war.

Andromache: The Widow of Troy

Andromache, the wife of the noble Trojan prince Hector, is left alone to mourn the loss of her husband and son. In the ashes of Troy, she finds solace in her memories and a determination to rebuild her life.
